Importance of Classic literature

The vast repertory of classic literature is introduced to children only when they are in their teens. We believe that children should be introduced to the classics at an early age, and that too in the abridged form.

We have made it our mission to open the classic literature to children in the age group of 7-12.

Our Classic catalog

We have so far published three classics. We have abridged these rare classics, which have not been abridged before for children, retaining their original flavor. To make them understandable we have illustrated them. In later years the transition from abridged to unabridged classics will be smooth for children and they will be able to savor the sweetness of the original classics. We take our work very seriously. We have therefore insisted that all our children's classic books will be reviewed only by a reviewer who is a teacher and an expert in classic literature. We are thankful that Billy Bob Buttons of the 'Wishing Shelf' arranges for the same reviewer, who has a Masters in literature, so that you are assured of the quality of our books. REMEMBER ...

- Our education is incomplete without a study of classics.
- Children brought up on fantasy and other literature find it difficult to understand and appreciate classic literature in later years.
